

Information:

This symposium aims to provide a meeting point for teachers interested in innovation and in improving the quality of their classroom practices, and researchers whose work focuses on the challenges arising from the teaching of foreign languages. As the title indicates, the presentations will focus on two specific themes: content and language integrated learning (CLIL) and intercultural language education. These two themes have been chosen because of their importance in current educational tendencies and also for their power to transform basic aspects of foreign language education. Whilst CLIL methodology allows for the treatment of language as a true vehicle for communication by providing a gateway for accessing subject knowledge, Intercultural Language Education takes as its starting point the integration of language and culture and emphasises the respect for other languages and cultures by considering the learner as a potential mediator between people of different cultures.
