Imaging pronunciation - from sight to sound with Robin Walker

November 25, 2018 2:00 PM in Madrid. Click here to register

Pronunciation can be problematic because of a skills component that requires meaningful input during the initial acquisition stage. This is often through explications whose effectiveness is limited. This talk looks at how to use images to support or substitute explanations, and hopefully make learners' efforts in the early stages of acquiring new pronunciation more productive. Charts and tables, waveforms, free-form, and some (surprising) live images. We'll look at a wide range of ways of using sight for sound.
