

Your favourite website: The Education Endowment Foundation's Teaching and Learning Toolkit <https://educationendowmentfoundation.org.uk/resources/teaching-learning-toolkit> . It's my go-to place to find robust evidence on what works in education, with accessible summaries of educational research on the most effective approaches to improving learners' attainment.

A gadget you can't live without: my tablet. It has absolutely everything I need for work and leisure!

Something you'd never throw away: my integrity and my principles.

Who or what inspires you? The highly unusual combination of revolutionaries and peacemakers, like Martin Luther King Junior, the Mahatma Gandhi and Pope Francis, who effected significant changes without aggression or recourse to violence.

Useful teaching tool: a teacher's undivided attention. The best tool to facilitate impactful learning!

Your favourite lesson: I haven't taught it yet! The day I feel I have taught it will be the day I need to leave the profession.

Your favourite bit about your talk: I like the bits where I have used Literature or philosophy to help me make points clear.

A lesson you've learnt while teaching: to be fully present for my students and open to what's going on.
